DICKS' STANDARD PLAYS.

THE influence which Dramatic Productions have exercised over Society is a fact now so generally acknowledged as to render proof of it uncalled for and intrusive, while, at the same time, the innate beauty of these offsprings of genius and indications of character is as universally recognised.

On the Continent, the attempts to collect scattered plays have been many and successful; in England, however, the labourers in this interesting pursuit have been few, although not idle. The French Drama has been preserved, while that of our country is fast sinking into oblivion, and if not speedily garnered by friendly hands, must perish irrecoverably.

To preserve the successful relics of the London stage from this untoward fate is the object of DICKS' EDITION OF STANDARD PLAYS, which it is hoped will furnish an interminable fund of choice pieces to the Profession, besides affording instruction to the histrionic student and guide for embryo authors.

NOTICE

TO THE PROFESSION AND OUR AMATEUR SUBSCRIBERS—Fifty years ago the public was denied the boon of Cheap Literature. Plays published at that period were limited and expensive. Time and the Law have conferred on the Dramatic Profession advantages which are incalculable from an instructive and business point of view. We have now an assortment of upwards of ONE THOUSAND (1,189) FREE ACTING PLAYS, affording a benefit to Actor and Amateur, invaluable to both. There is a limit to some things, but not to Plays. As the "STANDARD PLAYS" are becoming few and far between, we must in future refrain from publishing two numbers weekly. Those only what are most desirable and popular (as they fall out of copyright) will be added to this series from time to time as the opportunity occurs and the intrinsic merit of the Plays justify.

LIST OF DICKS' STANDARD PLAYS.

PLAYS MARKED THUS (*) CANNOT BE REPRESENTED "FREE OF CHARGE" IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

WHAT CLEMENT SCOTT SAYS ABOUT EXPIRED COPYRIGHT PLAYS.

WE have it on the best authority that in the course of the past century a million new plays have been given to the Theatrical World, to say nothing of reproductions.

The bounds of imagination have greatly widened, no doubt; but, when we come to look into the matter, we find that this unparalleled supply is, after all, a supply of the sort which deluded our ancestors when the same play appeared, only in another dress or disguise. The New Plays are Not New Plays. Not one in a hundred is a new play in the sense that it opens any novel region of thought. Our literary output amount for the most part to a consistent embezzlement of the honours of the past, and the fact remains that there are a thousand ideas of extremest antiquity which are habitually treated as if they were even "topically modern." There is no denying the fact that the Drama of to-day has, in nine cases out of ten, made its bow to the public several times before, and will in all probability come up again in the days of our great-grandchildren, exemplifying the remark of Solomon anent there being no new thing under the sun; but, from experience, I am convinced that no ingenious dramatist should ever lose a chance of working up old and successful material, for many an excellent new house can be built of old bricks. The association of ideas will very often suggest a favourable subject.

Amidst the rage which prevails for modern plays, I regret to find that many of older date, whose reputation I thought established, are falling into neglect, and are even out of print, some I could name are no longer to be purchased, amongst many of which the present authors have evidently taken the ideas. The mere circumstance of their having given rise to many popular plays, recently represented, would be interesting to those Managers who have to pay the "Fee," but their intrinsic merits have much stronger claims on public attention. One author has certainly surpassed his original in those touches of modern wit, I may say "up to date" humour, with which his composition abounds, but in dramatic knowledge of stage effect, and, above all, brevity of detail, which is exemplified, the original far excels his copyist.

In the hope that this hint may convey to the public, and call the attention to the sterling, though neglected, merit of our Standard Edition of Plays which have received the sanction of time.

CLEMENT SCOTT.

INCLUDED in the above list are a number of ONE ACT PIECES. The figures in the two last columns indicate the few characters required—M., Male; F., Female. The object of calling special attention to these short Pieces is to provide a series that only require one Scene, and which occupy about twenty to thirty minutes in performance. They can be thoroughly recommended—the plots are excellent, the characters droll, the incidents funny, the language humorous, and all the situations, bye-play, positions, pantomime business, scenery, and tricks are plainly set down and clearly explained, so that the merest novice could put any of them on the Stage. Included in this list are all the most laughable and effective pieces of the class ever produced.

In ordering, please copy the figure at the commencement of each Play, which indicates the number of the Piece in "Dicks' STANDARD PLAYS."
